

life dedicated to improving his beloved communities of Wethersfield and Hartford.

Born in Hartford in 1922, Dan spent his childhood there, attending Hartford Public schools, and graduating from the University of Connecticut College of Pharmacy in 1943. Shortly after his graduation, Dan enlisted in the U.S. Army. He was deployed to Paris, France, to the 217th General Hospital where he served on a medical train that carried wounded soldiers from Germany to France. After his service in World War II, Dan was honorably discharged in 1946 and returned to Hartford to continue serving those within his community as a pharmacist.

Upon his return to Hartford, he met his wife Rose DiSilvestro. After a short courtship, Dan and Rose would go on to marry, forming a lifelong bond that would continue for 66 loving years and would see them raise their daughter and son. Wherever he lived, Dan made a lasting impression. He was always immaculately dressed even when mowing the lawn, had a knack for building positive relationships with people from all walks of life, and was a great conversationalist.

In 1948, Dan and his brother-in-law opened their own pharmacy in Hartford, Rialto Pharmacy. Besides providing his knowledge and expertise to the public, Rialto Pharmacy turned into a hub for the area's Italian immigrants. Dan helped explain what each medication was and provided flexible payment plans for any immigrants that needed it. Dan's work in retail led him to pursue a second passion: retail politics. Dan was tapped by the Hartford powerbrokers to run for the city council. He was elected and became the youngest person to hold the seat at the time. This began Dan's long career in service to the community which would continue until his final days.

As a public servant, Dan was truly exceptional. After ably serving on the Hartford City Council, Dan was elected to the State senate, becoming public health chair where he championed the fluoridation of drinking water and screenings for newborns. He later became chief of the drug division for the State of Connecticut's Department of Consumer Protection.

The Camillieres moved to Wethersfield in 1970 where Dan and Rose raised their family. After Dan sold the pharmacy, he ran for the Wethersfield Town Council, serving as secretary for 17 years and, later, proudly served for two terms as mayor. Dan's trademark smile presided over town meetings on building new schools, repairing old buildings, and setting water rates. He was a regular sight at town Memorial Day parades and was a mentor to many in politics, serving on the Democratic State Central Committee.

I count myself as very lucky to have met Dan during my formative years in politics. I was probably only 16 when I first shook his hand, and I remember with perfect clarity being put in charge of campaign lawn sign distribution as a 17-year-old volunteer for the Wethersfield Democrats. It was in that job where I discovered that no one had more friends—and more prime front lawn sites—in Wethersfield than Dan Camilliere. He treated me wonderfully during those early years. To me, he was the model American man—invested in his community, putting service over self, modeling responsible entrepreneurship. I think I decided to go into politics as a profession because of the example Dan Camilliere set in my hometown.

In reflection of the loss of a decorated public servant, veteran, husband, father, grandfather, and advocate for the communities of Hartford and Wethersfield, CT, I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing and honoring the life of Dan Camilliere. ●
